A: No, you can't. While RAID 6 appears to offer 6x the redundancy of RAID 5 (and therefore a theoretically infinite capacity to lose data), the reality is that two disks will go out in a row, and that won't be resharded. You can reshard only the disks which are in the same set. RAID 6 is really only good as a mechanism for disk failure protection - you need to be able to recover the redundancy of RAID 5 in the event of any one of your disks failing. Hi Steven. Thanks for getting back to me so quickly. I have been thinking about that. Great post. I completely agree with you. I had a professor who taught at Kellogg, and was a student of Burnet. He also taught at a branch of Iowa State in Ames, and I had the opportunity to meet him a couple of times at ICS. I'm pretty sure he did some teaching there too. He was in and out of the UP for quite a few years, and ended up taking a job at Ohio University. He was a wonderful person, and the world is a better place for his passing.
